

Select: Short Duration Bond Portfolio (SDBP)

The Select: Short Duration Bond Portfolio has been launched to take advantage of the conditions now being seen in the bond market and not seen since the Global Financial Crisis. This portfolio is designed to meet a cautious investor's demand for a low risk greater total yield enhancement over and above that offered by cash.

How has this opportunity arisen?

Rising inflation and associated interest rate hikes have seen global bond yields rise. In the UK, shorter dated bond yields spiked on the back of the September mini-budget and prices have also correspondingly dropped. An opportunity for investors to benefit has thus arisen as the price of shorter dated bonds have also fallen in line with the rest of the credit market where prices are now discounted relative to their value at maturity (par).

For example, the same pool of bonds available in the Select: Short Duration Bond Portfolio was yielding below 2% as recently as a few months ago but is currently around 6% (as at, 30/12/2022).

Investors can now invest via the Short Duration Bond Portfolio in funds exposed to these shorter dated bonds with the reasonable expectation that as constituent bonds shorten in date, 'pulling to par', the value of the fund will increase and they will be able to sell the fund at a higher price, crystallising value. Investors will also benefit from the on-going bond coupon payments reinvested into the underlying funds.

Yield generation

The key sources of yield generation in the portfolio are:

Coupon - the annual interest that is paid on the bond

Pull to Par - on average the underlying bonds are trading below their par value (100), typical average price around 93 (31/10/2022). As these bonds get closer to their maturity date then the price will see the uplift to redemption, issue price of 100 (hence the pull to par)

Yield to Redemption - this is the yield on the bond an investor will earn in the form of both coupon and uplift in value if they own the bonds until maturity

Portfolio Duration - this is the measure of how much a bond price is likely to move with a change in interest rates

About the Short Duration Bond Portfolio

What is it?

A low-risk short term investment opportunity designed to take advantage of the exceptional current bond market conditions.

How does it work?

We use mainly shorter dated investment grade bonds to benefit from current increased yields and the "pull to par" effect at maturity.

How does it help?

This gives clients who are cautious about investing in equities a yield enhancement over and above that offered by cash.

*[1] Portfolio yield as of 30/12/2022. The portfolio yield is monitored daily. If there is a material reduction in yield, then IFAs will be notified. Copia aim to take all reasonable steps to avoid causing any foreseeable harm to customers. If the yield on the portfolio compresses to 5% and then again 3%, notifications will be sent out at both points to assist Advisers assessing ongoing Suitability and equip customers to make informed good decisions based on price and value. Ultimately, at a lower yield (c2%) this portfolio may no longer represent an attractive investment proposition delivering the required value for money to those retail customers and Copia will again in that scenario prompt those invested to assist Advisers in fulfilling their Customer Duty to deliver a good outcome for retail customers.

*[2] The volatility of the portfolio is 3.5% as of 31/10/2022, calculated by Copia using Blackrock Capital Market Assumptions, and for Suitability purposes represents risk level 3. Volatility on the portfolio will be monitored on an ongoing basis and managed accordingly. For illustration, the equivalent volatility for a Cautious (level 4) portfolio is 5.2%.
